1. On 26 January 1952, the Revolutionary Military Council issued an order commending all volunteer medical personnel who had participated at the Anti-America Aid-Korea front and giving them public recognition for their achievements during 1951.
2. The commendation stated that over 30 medical and surgical teams, with over 2,000 medical personnel, served with distinction during 1951. Incomplete statistics showed that they performed over 65,430 operations; obtained and transfused over 37,600 cc's of fresh blood, and cured over 30,000 sick and wounded.
3. These volunteer medical personnel also were cited because they assisted medical personnel attached to troop units reach a higher technical level; helped organize and systematize work of hospitals in rear areas and improved their medical treatments; improved nutrition in field hospitals; improved the sanitation of military units; and successfully organized a blood bank under the most difficult conditions.
4. The commendation encouraged medical personnel of the Chinese Communist Army to learn from these volunteers and instructed supply personnel to make sure that the medical volunteers were well provided with food and quarters.
